REVIVING CULTURAL ROOTS

PRESERVING THE INDIGENOUS HERITAGE OF CHHATTISGARH

Bhupesh government brings transformative changes to tribal lives.

Chhattisgarh's own original culture is recognized all over the world. This land has been related to ancient civilization and primitive traditions of the society. Throughout the ages, humans have inhabited these lands nestled alongside forests, mountains, caves, and rivers. The past and existence of Chhattisgarh is linked to the tribal community living on this land since time immemorial. Chhattisgarh holds a unique identity as a tribal majority state in the country. The Government of Chhattisgarh is continuously working to increase this identity even more widely. With the formation of the new government in Chhattisgarh, the land of tribals acquired for setting up a steel plant in Bastar region was returned to them. Along with this, the government got the release of innocent tribals who were detained in jail in various cases. The Forest Rights Act, which gives rights to tribals over their water-forest-land, was implemented on priority in Chhattisgarh.

As a result, tribals got individual and community forest rights pattas. The government has expanded the scope of forest produce collection for the tribal community who earn their livelihood through collection of forest produce. Now instead of 6, there is collection of 65 types of forest produce and government procurement on support price. In this way, Chhattisgarh has now become the largest forest produce collecting state in the country. About 400 Swami Atmanand excellent schools are being established to provide quality education to the children in the tribal-dominated areas of Surguja and Bastar. The youth of the specially protected tribal community have been given direct appointment in government jobs. In Chhattisgarh, under the leadership of Chief Minister Bhupesh Baghel, the government has taken several major decisions in the interest of tribals during the last four and a half years. With these efforts of the government, the path of economic prosperity has been opened for the tribals.

Government schemes bring prosperity to tribal communities.

The previous government had acquired land from the farmers of Lohandiguda of Bastar division for setting up the industry. The tribals were continuously opposing it. After the formation of the new government, the tribals were given back their land. 1707 tribal farmers were given back their 4200 acres of acquired land.

So far 718 cases have been disposed off by various courts. 944 innocent tribals were benefitted by this decision.

In the districts of Bastar division, 30,439 hectares of land out of orange forest area has been classified back to the revenue head. With this, the residents of that place can be given leases for agricultural business. New industries can be established.

A separate department has also been constituted in Chhattisgarh for Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes. Apart from the department, a Scheduled Castes Advisory Council has been constituted, so that major decisions related to tribal welfare can be taken.
