SMALL CAR CONQUERS BIG HILL

SOON AFTER THE TATA NANO WAS LAUNCHED, TEAM AUTO TODAY WAS THE FIRST TO TAKE IT TO KHARDUNG LA. HERE IS A SNAPSHOT OF THE DRIVE

The little Tata Nano created big news back when it was launched. Apart from the usual 'comparos' and test drive, Auto Today acquired one and put it through a grueling long term test. However, what happened next was unthinkable! We decided to drive our very own Tata Nano CX to Khardung La, the highest stretch of motorable road perched at 18,380 ft. The little Nano was driven all the way from Delhi to Leh crossing treacherous passes like the Baralacha, Tanglang La and so on.

The run-up from Leh at 10,500 ft to Khardung La at 18,380 ft saw the Nano achieve another feat! Due to an army convoy coming downhill, we had to park our backup SUV at the base. So the 39-km uphill drive saw the team of four packed into the Nano. Even with the added weight, the Nano took the massive inclines with ease. And although at times we had to stop completely, eventually, the little Nano pulled through. ■
