

"SOCIAL MEDIA DRAWS YOU IN THROUGH A COMPLEX SYSTEM OF REWARDS THAT RELEASE HAPPY HORMONES IN YOUR BRAIN"

DR NIMESH DESAI
Director, IHBAS, Delhi

boon to society became a poisoned chalice. When it began, social media enabled people to stay connected with friends and family across the world, forge new relationships and interact with like-minded people, while getting more exposure to other cultures and events around the world and expanding their worldview. "With the breakdown of joint families, social media initially gave everyone a chance to be connected in nuclear households," observes Tulsi Patel, a professor of sociology at Delhi University. As recently as 2021, a survey of 2,000 Indians by online dating app Bumble found that some 72 per cent believed they could fall in love with a person online and nearly half felt that dating