

been teaching social studies for almost 15 years but watching this show I realised how Babasaheb was a real life hero. I want all my students to see him not only as the Father of Indian Constitution, but also as someone who worked for the country, despite facing caste discrimination." said Ms. Preeti Mehra, a teacher from a Delhi Govt school.

Savitri Rani, 68, who came to watch the show with her son, said, "My son and I came here from Trilokpuri. I have never seen anything like this in my life, it felt that Babasaheb himself came alive on the stage. I am very grateful to Delhi Govt". The musical received a terrific response from people of all sections and went housefull on all days. "We were lucky to find seats on Bookmyshow, before the tickets sold out. Never has there been a show this grand in India, more so a government organised show." said Prateek Singh, a student from Ramjas College.

The show was the first among the many events planned by DTTDC in the coming year. In Delhi Government's Rozgaar budget this year tourism sector will play a major role in boosting the economy. To fulfil this, the DTTDC will be organising more such grand events that attract tourism in Delhi. Shows such as these not only promote art and culture, but also serve a social purpose and support the economy. Through this musical the Delhi Government ensured that even a child from the most underprivileged section of society could see a Broadway like cultural show and could find inspiration from the life of one of the greatest leaders of our country.
