

The Ashmolean terracotta goddess, a moulded plaque recovered in 1883 from modern Tamluk in West Bengal, site of the ancient port of Tamralipti.

In 1883 a terracotta plaque of a goddess figure with a wonderfully elaborate coiffure was recovered from the river bank at Tamluk (see illustration). This is now recognised as a product of what is coming to be known as the Chandraketugarh culture, which came into its own with the