MALAYA INTO MALABAR

British vessels anchored off Calicut, on the Malabar coast, engraved from a drawing by James Forbes, from his four-volume Oriental Memoirs, 1813.

MALABAR, n.p. The name of the sea-board country which the Arabs call the ‘Pepper-Coast’, the ancient Kerala of the Hindus ... applied, apparently, first by the Arab or Arabo-Persian mariners of the Gulf. The substantive part of the name, Malai, is the Dravidian term for ‘mountain’, in the Sanskritised form Malaya, which is applied specifically to the southern portion of the Western Ghauts, and from which is taken the indigenous term Malayalam, distinguishing that branch of the Dravidian language in the tract we call Malabar ... In the great temple inscription in Tanjore we find the
