the present generation of India's historians, in alliance with Nehruism, secularism, Marxism and media bias, are conducting an 'experiment with untruth', through the 'systematic distortion' of India's history by suppressing the true facts about the cultural damage inflicted on India by militant Islam and evangelical Christianity.[20]

Goel has many admirers both at home and abroad. Indeed, it is a striking feature of the Hindutva movement that some of its most vociferous proponents are Hindus who have settled overseas in Britain and the United States.

In Britain these views appear to have found an articulate champion in the well-known media figure Pandit Dr Raj Sharma, founder and vice-president of the Hindu Priest Association (UK). If you read Dr Sharma's report The Caste System, published in 2011 under the auspices of the Hindu Council UK, you will learn that it was the British who invented the caste system in order to subdue the Indian populace, and that the Orientalists who first translated and published the great Sanskrit classics did so as part of 'a strategy by the East India Company and other foreign parties in India to penetrate the Hindu Indian psyche by interpreting the Vedic scriptures ... [so as to] better manipulate the Indian populace, thereby facilitating the "divide and rule" policy more effectively'.

That policy, according to Dr Sharma, included the propagation of the myth of the Aryan invasion. This myth, Dr Sharma tells us, was developed in 1848 by 'Maximillian Muller ... a highly-paid German employee of the East India Company in order to deny any political or moral basis to the Hindu claim for independence from British rule. For, under this theory, Hindus too were as much foreigners in India as were the British. This theory was not openly challenged for over 120 years so that many Indians were duped into believing they were descendants of a superior foreign civilisation. Such an imperialist hypothesis was designed to