for the finished article is mine alone and no one other than myself should be held responsible.

Next, my thanks to those kind persons who have allowed me to publish one or more of their photographs taken in the field. They include: the distinguished epigraphist Professor Iravatham Mahadevan who also allowed me to quote from his work Tamil Epigraphy; anthropologists Christa and Günter Neuenhofer from Germany; Christian Luczantis of SOAS; Dr Shanti Pappu of the Sharma Centre of Heritage Education; Jibu Rajan from Trivandrum; Siddeshwar Prasad from Karnataka; Sharat Sunder and Dr Ajay Sekhar from Kerala; Nigal Kalathil and Dr B. Jambulingam from Tamil Nadu; Professor Anand Ranganathan of JNU and Newslaundry; and the photographer Richard Davies in the UK.

My special thanks also to: polymath and publisher Dr Roberto Calasso, his translator Richard Dixon and the publisher Farrar, Straus and Giroux for giving me permission to quote two extracts from Ardor; Professor George L. Hart and poet and scholar Dr Hank Heifetz and Columbia University Press for giving me permission to quote two extracts from their work Four Hundred Songs of War and Wisdom: an Anthology of Poems from Classical Tamil; teacher and writer on Buddhism Stephen Batchelor and Riverhead Books for giving me permission to quote from Verses from the Center: A Buddhist Vision of the Sublime; and poet and teacher Andrew Schelling and White Pine Press for giving me permission to quote from Dropping the Bow: Poems from Ancient India.

Among the many other scholars, academics and local experts to whom I owe thanks for assisting in a variety of ways, from offering scholarly advice to local expertise, are: Dr Alison Ohta, Ed Weech and Nancy Charley at the RAS; Dr Richard Blurton, Joe Cribb and Dr Robert Bracey at the British Museum; Dr Susan Strong, Dr Nick Barnard and Dr Rosemary Crill at the V&A; John Falconner and Dr Jennifer
