

A couple described as ‘Malay Waders’ but more correctly Malai Vedans, a tribe of hunter-gatherers inhabiting the mountains of north Kerala and western Tamil Nadu. The caption describes them as ‘A class of savage people, who never appear in Towns, they are not permitted to wear cloths [sic] but large leaves, their chattering speaking very difficil [sic] to understood [sic]’. Today they number some seventeen thousand, equally divided between the two states.