

Brahmin priests conduct their ancient rites over a fire in the corridor of a South Indian temple, following rituals that were first established many millennia ago.