111 by the time he reached Manikpur, there were only eleven courtiers left: Thackston (trans.), History of Akbar, Vol. 4, p. 267.

112 ‘ground his bones to powder and made his body’: Badauni, Muntakhabh al-Tawarikh, Vol. 2, p. 99.

112 ‘twisted him in its trunk, stepped on him’: Beveridge (trans.), History of Akbar, Vol. 4, p. 147.

112 would swell to 38 per cent, almost at a par now with the Turanis at 39 per cent: Khan, India’s Polity in the Age of Akbar, p. 186.

112 ‘like the constellation of the Bear in the sky’: Afzal Husain, The Nobility of Akbar and Jahāngīr: A Study of Family Groups, New Delhi: Manohar, 1999, p. 53.

112 Akbar now also pragmatically restored Gondwana: Chandra, Medieval India: From the Sultanat to the Mughals, Part 2, p. 106.

113 use at his discretion for ‘deserving people’: Khan, ‘The Nobility under Akbar and the Development of His Religious Policy, 1560–1580’, p. 33.

113 ‘be very much annoyed’ by the company of Shirazi: Badauni, Muntakhabh al-Tawarikh, Vol. 2, p. 34.

113 ‘was a great act of injustice to both of them’: Ibid., p. 102.

114 ‘One eye was lost in a broil with his brother’: James Tod, Annals and Antiquities: Or the Central and Western Rajput State of India, Vol. 1, p. 50.

115 ‘knew his own strength and felt at ease about Chittor’: Eliot, The History of India, as Told by Its Own Historians, p. 170.

115 ‘the absence of the kingly virtues’: Tod, Annals and Antiquities of Rajasthan, p. 325.

116 garrison, it is said, ‘uttered cries of derision’: Eliot, The History of India, as Told by Its Own Historians, p. 171.

116 ‘the shovel was nearly as important as the musket’: de la Garza, The Mughal Empire at War, p. 105.

116 ‘zigzag trenches and sunken gun emplacements’: Ibid., p. 118.

117 the worth of silver and gold had reduced to dust: Ibid.

117 ‘horses themselves looked like beasts from a nightmare’: Schimmel, The Empire of the Great Moghuls, p. 88.

118 ‘with a spiked breastplate who looked like a commander’: John Dowson, History of India, Vol. 4, p. 188.

118 ‘This is the fire of jauhar’: Thackston (trans.), The History of Akbar, Vol. 4, p. 363.

119 ‘it was expected that a besieged enemy would surrender soon’: de la Garza, The Mughal Empire at War, p. 173.

120 The Turani people have ever been soldiers: Ibid., p. 95.

120 We, as far as it is within our power, remain busy in jihad: Khan, India’s Polity in the Age of Akbar, p. 124.

121 ‘reported to launch a payload of over 3000 pounds’: de la Garza, The Mughal Empire at War, p. 78.

PART 3: THE WORLD IS A BRIDGE (1569–1578)

127 ‘he found the place overrun with ghosts’: Monserrate, The Commentary of Father Monserrate, p. 36.

127 Shaikh Salim lived a life as frugal as his surroundings: Badauni, Muntakhabh al-Tawarikh, Vol. 3, p. 27.

127 ‘as the common people of this country have an old custom’: Beveridge (trans.), Akbarnama, Vol. 2, p. 505.