398 ‘It must be considered that the Divine mercy attaches itself ’: Beveridge (trans.), Akbarnama, Vol. 3, p. 1012.
399 ‘was the loss of all his treasures’: du Jarric, Akbar and the Jesuits, p. 75.
399 ‘Consider nobility of caste and high birth’: Faruqui, The Princes of the Mughal Empire, p. 261.
399 ‘You can understand this truth’: Ibid., p. 262.
400 ‘groves, orchards, gardens’: du Jarric, Akbar and the Jesuits, p. 38.
401 ‘exceptionally high’ at 43.3 per cent: Moosvi, ‘Data on Mughal-Period Vital Statistics A Preliminary Survey of Usable Information’, Proceedings of the Indian History Congress, Vol. 58, 1997, p. 346.
401 ‘depopulated whole houses and cities’: Sir Henry M. Eliot, Bibliographical Index to the Historians of Muhammedan India, Vol. 1, p. 296.
401 ‘that men ate their own kind’: du Jarric, Akbar and the Jesuits, p. 244.
401 ‘sent one crore and ten lakh from the Treasury’: Habib, ‘Akbar and Social Inequities’, p. 303.
401 ‘the inhabitants of hot countries’: Beveridge (trans.), Akbarnama, Vol. 3, p. 1095.
401 ‘the people of the town exhibited towards the Father’: du Jarric, Akbar and the Jesuits, p. 79.
402 ‘was greatly appreciated by the people of the country’: Ibid., pp. 80–81.
402 ‘publicly expressed his devotion to our Lord’: Ibid.
402 ‘whenever the Portuguese, or other Christians at the court’: Ibid., p. 82.
402 ‘to be made for himself in ivory by his own craftsmen’: Ibid., p. 67.
403 ‘harked back to Safavid painting of the mid-century’: Singh, Real Birds in Imagined Gardens, p. 46.
403 expertly fused Hindustani effervescence: Ibid., p. 48.
403 as ‘Aqa Riza of Herat’: Ibid.
403 ‘was marked by the use of vivid, flat colours’: Ibid., p. 46.
403 ‘an Oedipal gesture of rejection’: Singh, Real Birds in Imagined Gardens, p. 48.
403 ‘twenty phials of double-distilled spirits’: Thackston (trans.), Jahangirnama, p. 185.
403 ‘during those days my only food’: Ibid., p. 186.
404 ‘became violently enamoured’: Beveridge (trans.), Akbarnama, Vol. 3, p. 1095.
404 ‘He kept constant company with Akbar, like the setting to a pearl’: Mukhia, Historians and Historiography, p. 53.
405 ‘From not fully considering the matter’: Beveridge (trans.), Akbarnama, Vol. 3, p. 1104.
405 In the east were Bengal and Orissa: Henry G. Keene, The Turks in India: Critical Chapters on the Administration of that Country, London: W. H. Allen, 1879, pp. x–xiii.
405 the sultanates resumed bickering and quarrelling with one another: See Pillai, Rebel Sultans for a history of the Deccan sultanates.
407 struggle that arose at this point was only the final act: Subrahmanyam and Alam, ‘The Deccan Frontier and Mughal Expansion, ca. 1600: Contemporary Perspectives’, Journal of the Economic and Social History of the Orient, Vol. 47, No. 3, 2004, pp. 357–89.
407 sighed Abu’l Fazl, ‘became a tedious affair’: Raghavan, Attendant Lords, p. 173.
407 ‘in glittering armour, mounted on an elephant’: Fazl quoted in Radhey Shyam, The Kingdom of Ahmadnagar, New Delhi: Motilal Banarsidass, 1966, p. 223.
408 ‘clad in armour…with a drawn sword in her hand’: Pillai, Rebel Sultans, p. 143.
408 ‘The end of the day,’ wrote a despairing Abu’l: Raghavan, Attendant Lords, p. 174.

PART 6: CROUCHING LION, RISING SUN (1598–1605)

413 ‘any excess of anger made him ill’: Beveridge (trans.), Akbarnama, Vol. 3, p. 1096.