

GLOW OF DEATH
Cave 1 has had fibreoptic lighting since 2002, but mercury and tungsten lamps lit the paintings for decades. They cast a greenish-brown glow and the heat had a deleterious effect on the pigments. Seen here is Raghu Rai's photograph of the famed Vajrapani image in the cave as it is now; *(Inset) the colour-corrected version of how the original may have looked, on the basis of colours in the better-preserved murals
