(b) Owing to defective organisation inside India the lines of communication from the seaports to the interior and from one part of the country to another are not controlled by the Congress, but by the Government.

(c) The machinery for collecting revenue—on which depends the existence of the British Government in India—has not been seriously impaired. There have been deficits in most provinces, no doubt, but the Government have been able to make up either by increased taxation or by borrowing.

It should always be remembered that a nationalist movement can succeed in paralysing a foreign Government only when either or all of the following steps are taken :

(1) Prevention of tax and revenue collection.
(2) Adoption of measures whereby help from other quarters—whether financial or military—may not reach the Government in times of distress.
(3) Winning over the sympathy and support of the present supporters of the British Government in India—that is, of the Army, the Police and the Civil Servants—so that orders given by the Government for crushing the movement will not be carried out.
(4) Actual attempt to seize power by force of arms.

The last step has to be ruled out, because the Congress is pledged to non-violence. But it is nevertheless possible to paralyse the present administration and compel it to submit to our demands if we can adopt the following measures :

(1) Prevent collection of tax and revenue.
(2) Through labour and peasant organisation prevent all kinds of help from reaching the Government when they are in difficulty.
(3) Win the sympathy and support of the Government's own supporters by means of our superior propaganda.

If these three measures are adopted, the Governmental machinery can be thrown out of gear. In the first place, they will have no money to meet the cost of administration. In the second place,
