V. The attitude of the Indian people in the present war as compared with their attitude in the world war of 1914-18.
VI. The military position in India today.
VII. The importance for India of Japanese foreign policy in the Far East.

I. Lesson of the World War of 1914-18

The World War of 1914-18 had several lessons for humanity, but for the purpose of this note, I shall refer to only one. At the conclusion of that war, when the time came to remake the map of Europe, the Allied Powers—and Great Britain and France in particular—wanted to smash the Central Powers in such a manner that they would not be able to raise their heads again. The iniquities of the Treaty of Versailles were manifold, but Great Britain and France did not nevertheless succeed in disturbing the fundamental integrity and homogeneity of the German Reich. On the other hand, the two Empires, Austro-Hungarian and Ottoman, were completely broken up and today we see clearly what the result of that break-up has been. But for the German Reich, there would have been no power in Europe at the present time to challenge the Anglo-French combination.

It is clear from the events of the last few years and particularly from the events of the last twelve months, that the one outstanding obstacle in the path of building up a new Europe and a new world is the heterogeneous British Empire. And even if Great Britain is defeated in the present war, she will still remain the implacable foe of progress and evolution. Consequently, if the integrity of the British Empire is left untouched at the end of the war, it will be able to recover after a few years and then challenge the New Order. If the New Order is to last, the British Empire will have to be put out of action once for all and, to that end, it will have to be broken up completely.

The potential resources of the British Empire are incalculable and India is still the jewel of that Empire. If a defeated Great Britain is given time and opportunity to develop these resources, she will be in position to fight again and perhaps more effectively. From the policy and administration of the British Government in India since September, 1939, it is clear that the more she has been collapsing in Europe, the more she has been trying to tighten her grip over India and to exploit the resources of that country