It is one of the cardinal principles of British diplomacy to adopt a sanctimonious role when she is fighting in reality for her own selfish interests. We saw in the World War that Great Britain posed as the champion of smaller nations and we see it now again. At the present time, in order to show that she is the champion of smaller nations, she is giving asylum in a most liberal manner to refugees from Czechoslovakia, Poland, Norway, Holland, Belgium, France, etc. These refugees like Benes, Sikorsi, King of Norway, Queen of Holland, De Gaulle of France, etc. are allowed to set up their own Governments in London under the name of "free" Governments. They are given the full diplomatic status of independent Governments by virtue of special legislation and most, if not all, of these "Governments" are financed by the British. By this clever subterfuge Great Britain endeavours to show to the world that she is in reality the champion of smaller nations.

Why should not the Axis Powers adopt the same policy and pay England back in her own coin? There are so many nations that are under the yoke of Great Britain and have been striving to throw off that yoke. The representatives of these suppressed nations could very well form their "free" Governments in the Axis countries in Europe; thereby they could counteract British propaganda on the one hand and on the other help the revolution in their respective countries. This could easily be done at least in the case of India.

V. The attitude of the Indian People in the Present War as compared with their attitude in the War of 1914-18.

In the World War the propaganda of the British Government in India was very successful and very little of German propaganda reached that country. Consequently, though the real desire of the people was that England should be defeated in the war, the impression was nevertheless created that the Allied Powers were very strong and would undoubtedly win. Under this impression many of the older leaders in India were persuaded to give their moral support to Great Britain in her war efforts. During that war, Great Britain was able to recruit one and half million soldiers in India and also to raise large sums of money as a free gift from India for the prosecution of the war. On the present occasion, the situation is quite the reverse of what it was in 1914-18. British propaganda in India has been a failure in spite of its best efforts
