

EXTENSION OF MEDICAL SERVICES - GOVT MEDICAL COLLEGES IN EVERY DISTRICT

It's no mean achievement for the youngest state in India to bag third rank in the latest Niti Aayog health index. Telangana's approach and policies on healthcare is worth emulating by other states and UTs as per the report.

To strengthen the healthcare infrastructure, the government is on an ambitious move to establish Telangana Institute of Medical Sciences (TIMS). The aim is not only to extend the medical services but also to provide corporate level medical facilities to the Poor. As part of the TIMS Super speciality Hospitals on the periphery (Four sides) of Hyderabad City, the TIMS at Gachibowli has already started extending its services to the people. Another three TIMS Super speciality Hospitals will be operational in Hyderabad shortly.

Apart from these speciality medical colleges, the State government is opening one Government Medical College in every district. As part of the Health City in Warangal, the government is coming up with a super speciality hospital with ultra-modern facilities with 2000 beds in a 24-storyed complex at a cost of Rs. 1,100 crore.

Preventing blindness - For the first time in the country, through KantiVelugu programme, the government helped 1.5 crore people undergo eye tests. 41 Lakh pairs of spectacles were also distributed.
