If a modern Diogenes were to hunt out for Indians with his lantern in these days, he would be sure to come across fervid Hindus, bigoted Muslims and fanatical souls deeply engrossed with the problem of tirelessly finding out how unjustly their own particular community was being treated, and he would have to ask in sorrow: 'Where are the Indians?'

—Syed Abdullah Brelvi, editor of the Bombay Chronicle, writing in May 1926

By independence, we have lost the excuse of blaming the British for anything going wrong. If hereafter things go wrong, we will have nobody to blame but ourselves.

—B.R. Ambedkar, speaking to the Constituent Assembly of India, 26 November 1949
