The Covid-19 pandemic came as a challenge for all and sundry. The S.P. Jain Institute of Management and Research (SPJIMR), Mumbai, was no exception. But turning this threat into an opportunity, the 42-year-old institute undertook a robust digital transformation, allowing it to seamlessly integrate online and in-person learning to minimise disruptions for its students.

It's this consistent emphasis on innovative education and programmes catering to a wide array of learning needs and career aspirations of its students that has helped SPJIMR overtake all other private management institutes in the country in the India Today Group-MDRA Best Business Schools survey. And this comes after the Financial Times in its 2023 global rankings placed SPJIMR among the top 40 B-schools in the world and the No. 1 in India for a master's in management.

Set up in 1981, SPJIMR offers a range of programmes with the core focus on nurturing leaders and change-makers of tomorrow. "In addition to regular programmes (like the postgraduate diploma in management)," says Prof. Varun Nagaraj, dean, SPJIMR, "our executive education initiatives
