Glass lovers Pallavi Chandra and Deeksha Saini are passionate experimenters and just crazy about nature. It's where they derive ideas and inspirations from when working on their products, designs, and collections. Mesmerised by the beauty, shine and sustainability of glass, both wanted to share this joy with others and the world and that's how Glass Forest happened (in 2019). "For us, each glass product is more than just another beautiful design; it has its own character, technique and narrates a beautiful story," says Chandra. With a repertoire of glass-based products ranging from tableware, installation and accessories, the pieces are conceptualised and designed elaborately, transcending the traditional boundaries of glassware, creating an aesthetic, emotive and inspirational character. Their approach towards design is very hands-on, practical and collaborative and they experiment and combine different glass techniques along with the interaction between glass and light.
