Shades of Festivity

Asian Paints celebrates West Bengal's creativity, traditions, and the spirit of the season

Your walls add drama, depth and dimension. Perhaps that's why they steal the focus during the festivities. Keeping this in mind, Asian Paints has launched a special festive paint pack, Royale Glitz. To mark the occasion, the brand paid tribute to West Bengal's culture. What's more, they turned Kolkata's iconic tram into living art to celebrate their 150th year. With cultural cues spread all over its walls and frame, it's definitely a sight for sore city-bred eyes.

Two bogies of the tram on the Tollygunge route have been beautified by Asian Paints. The first bogie showcases the 38-year journey of Asian Paints Sharad Shamman (APSS) in Kolkata through hand-painted artwork. While the exterior artwork of the first bogie features scenes from Kumartuli, Sindoor Khela, Dhunuchi Nach and highlights the first print advertisement and winning pandal.

Inside the first bogie, Pujo decor with cane installations, Alpona art, and a museum-style visual narrative of APSS' journey can be found. The second bogie, named Royale Glitz, offers a glimpse of heritage Kolkata with ultra-sheen Royale Glitz interiors and a Glitz photo booth. A true showcase of art, paints and culture.

Paints Perfected
Asian Paints' new Royale Glitz Festive Pack is a limited edition paint packaging inspired by the heritage of West Bengal, featuring intricate in-mold labeling (IML) designs. The packaging includes an exciting augmented reality (AR) feature. By scanning the can, consumers can embark on a virtual journey through the state's art, music, cuisine, dance, and architecture. This innovative packaging goes beyond being just a paint can; it serves as a gateway for consumers to immerse themselves in the soul of West Bengal.
