leader, who resigned as a TRS MLA and retained his assembly seat as a BJP candidate with a commanding majority in the by-election suggesting he should be at the helm.

There is no stopping Sanjay. He has declared that protests will be staged in all headquarters of erstwhile districts against the more significant Telangana State Public Service Commission (TSPSC) question paper leaks in March besides a massive rally of jobless youth in Warangal in the coming days. The BJP demands an inquiry into the TSPSC paper leaks by a sitting HC judge, dismissal of IT minister K.T. Rama Rao in the wake of allegations that those close to him are implicated, and compensation for those candidates disrupted by the exam cancellation with Rs 1 lakh each.

As a follow-up measure, the state BJP chief has constituted a task force that will write to the Chief Justice of India and the Chief Justice of the Telangana High Court to draw their attention to the TSPSC question papers issue besides demanding public hearings at prominent TSPSC exam coaching centres in Hyderabad and all universities in the state.

The saffron party is determined to step up pressure on the ruling BRS given that their cordial relations during KCR's first term between 2014 and 2018 have soured in recent years. It hopes to dislodge the pink party in the coming legislative assembly polls.

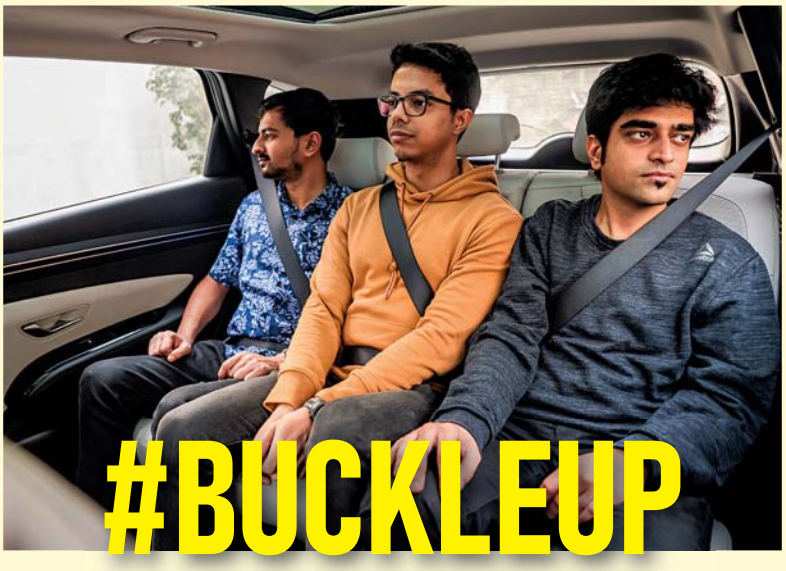

Analysts, however, are sceptical over the BJP's prospects. "While the

THE BRS'S TARGET OF SANJAY HAS PROMPTED THE BJP TO CONTINUE WITH HIM AS THE STATE PARTY CHIEF

BRS will find the going tough this time, the BJP influence is still far from being statewide," says Harathi Vageeshan, who teaches political science at the NALSAR University of Law, Hyderabad. But, as Kiran Kumar G., political science researcher at the University of Hyderabad, points out, the "BJP central leadership is concentrating more on the OBCs as they have two of the four Lok Sabha MPs, a Rajya Sabha member and two of the three MLAs from among them". Sanjay's strident approach is the first sign of a no-holds-barred campaign by both sides in the run-up to the election most likely in November. ■

The most basic safety feature in a vehicle is the seat belt. It is a primary restraint system and acts as the first line of defence in the event of an accident. In 2021, as per the Road Accidents in India survery by MoRTH, more than 16,000 people lost their lives due to the non usage of seat belts with over 39,000 reported injuries. Once again, statistics aside, the habit of using seat belts needs to be inculcated by understanding their importance and function. No matter where you're seated in the vehicle, your first point of action should be to fasten the seat belt. While there has been an encouraging rise in the usage of seat belts amongst those seated in the front, those seated in the rear continue to ignore its use. Of late, multiple states across the country have passed laws making the usage of rear seat belts mandatory, but the whole point of the #BeTheBetterGuy campaign is to help you appreciate its purpose and get into the habit of using seat belts irrespective of your seat in the vehicle, law or no law. Cars like the Hyundai Tucson offer three-point seat belts for all five occupants. Three-row vehicles like the Hyundai Alcazar offer a three-point seat belt for both last row occupants as well. Make use of them and urge those accompanying you to do the same. Start a chain reaction that helps to spread the message of safety.

It should also be noted that restraint systems in a vehicle (primarily seat belts and airbags) work in tandem to protect you. For instance, if you don't put your seat belts on, the airbags won't deploy compounding the risk of injury in case of an accident. Non-usage of seat belts is one of the primary reasons for injury or death in case of road accidents in India. The use of a seat belt should not depend on how fast or slow you're going, or where you're seated. Before the vehicle moves forward even an inch, everyone present inside should buckle up.
