Ever since Prime Minister Narendra Modi took charge of the Union government in 2014 for the first time, his prime focus has been the development of the poor and marginalized sections of the society. His government has worked relentlessly to provide social justice, dignity, and equal opportunities to all sections of the society irrespective of socio-economic and geographical backgrounds. As his objective has been to empower every citizen of the country to win against poverty, the strategies and policies of Prime Minister Modi-led government have been extensively supportive of the underprivileged.

In fact, Prime Minister Modi's mantra of Sabka Saath, Sabka Vikas, Sabka Vishwas and Sabka Prayas, has been the key driver behind India witnessing unprecedented economic development which has also been inclusive. He has often said: "Mere good governance is not enough. It has to be pro-people. Good governance is putting people at the centre of development process." One of the pillars of this inclusive growth, propelled by the prime minister's grand vision, is financial inclusion. Aiming to bring financial inclusion of all households, he launched the ambitious Pradhan Mantri Jan Dhan Yojana in 2014 with nearly 50 crore bank accounts being opened so far. The impact of this mission is not limited to just the opening of the bank account, it has encouraged, facilitated and amplified several other such
