The wide Indian gender gap

The Global Gender Gap Index was introduced by the World Economic Forum in 2006 to benchmark progress towards gender parity by countries. India figures among those ranked at the very bottom—pulling in at No. 135 out of 146 countries surveyed

India is worst in women's health

The report compares gender gaps in countries across four dimensions—economic opportunities, education, health, and political leadership. India's biggest cause of concern are health indicators where it has been consistently at the bottom

India among laggards in South Asia

Among all countries, South Asian nations rank the lowest with the widest gap in economic opportunities and health and second widest in educational attainment. India is placed a lowly 6th rank among our nine South Asian neighbours
