Q+A

FIGHTING FIT

Given the stunts Disha Patani performs, it's obvious she is an action star in the making, but releasing theatrically on July 29, Ek Villain Returns has ensured the actor brings oomph to the table instead

Q. Your Instagram feed highlights your ability to pull off breathtaking moves like the triple kick and front flip. Any offers to be an action heroine yet?

You may see me in something soon, but I do these things not just for films. To be honest, I am a boring person. So, when I am able to do a front flip on my own, I feel extremely cool about myself. That's the motivation, to get those five seconds of pleasure.

Q. On a day-to-day basis, what does it take to be a youth fitness icon?

I am consistent with my diet and my workouts. Once a week, I do, of course, have my cheat day but the remaining six days, I am totally on it. I must say I am not perfect. I have days where I feel like eating whatever. On others, I feel bloated and uncomfortable with myself, but all I try to do is be disciplined. I believe in making fitness a habit.

Q. You seem to have a mean streak going in Ek Villain Returns. How did you get into the skin of Rasika?

I am still confused about whether I played it right or wrong. There's a transition point where the characters change. That, I felt, was hard. I saw lots of thrillers and picked up a few nuances from them and made my own Rasika. She is someone who uses her sex appeal to attract men and to get what she wants. She feels greed is good. I had to digest the fact that that's how she functions.

Q. The intimate scenes are creating quite a buzz. How challenging were they?

I am not at all comfortable with them. I have a team of professionals, including an intimacy choreographer, who are taking care of each and every thing and making sure it is easier and less awkward. John [Abraham], along with Mohit [Suri, director] Sir ensured that I felt comfortable. It's part of the job, and as long as it looks good for people to watch, that's what matters.

– with Suhani Singh

