HOW TO PREPARE STUDYING IN JAPAN

General information to study in Japan, such as Japanese education system, the way to find and apply to a Japanese school, etc. is offered through the website "Study in Japan" (https://www.studyinjapan.go.jp/en/) by Japan Student Services Organization (JASSO). In addition, this website posts "Scholarship for International Students in Japan" which contains details of scholarships provided by various organizations. Indian students who have an interest in studying in Japan should check this website out first.

The University of Tokyo is responsible for providing information on studying in Japan to Indian students on commission from the Ministry of Education, Culture, Sports, Science and Technology of Japan (MEXT). The University of Tokyo India office holds webinars for Indian students about 30 times a year, and a few other Japanese universities participate each time, introducing their universities and explaining their support for international students. Please refer to the University of Tokyo India office's website (https://www.u-tokyo.ac.jp/adm/utindia/en/index.html) for more details.

Some Japanese universities like Ritsumeikan University and Ritsumeikan Asia Pacific University have offices in India and are actively trying to attract students from India. They hold their own study abroad information sessions and visit high schools.

There are many other websites that offer information that will be useful for you to find the university, supervisor, and scholarship of your choice. The Embassy of Japan in India maintains a website with a collection of useful links to these sites. Please check out the Embassy's Facebook page for useful information too.

If you have a shortlist of universities and departments you would like to enroll in, visit their websites for information on how to apply. Note that application methods, timings and requirements vary from university to university. Most schools in Japan start in April, but an increasing number of universities and departments are offering September/October enrolment. Many universities also offer tuition fee reductions or scholarships of their own, so it is a good idea to get information on these as well. It is recommended that you decide on a university or other institution approximately one year before you want to start your studies and start your preparations.

Though we think many Indian students studying in Japan quickly learn to speak Japanese, Japanese proficiency is useful for international students in Japan not only for studying and living but also for their future. Therefore, it's better they study it in advance.

There are some ways to study the Japanese language in India, such as going to a Japanese language institution or studying by yourself. Japan Foundation, a Japanese public organization to promote Japanese culture and language in foreign countries, offers a free online website and an app to study Japanese, which are "Minato" and "Irodori" (https://minato-jf.jp/). If there are no Japanese language institutions around you or it is difficult for you to attend school regularly, please take advantage of these online facilities.

TO THE INDIAN STUDENT

Japanese schools offer a wide range of educational content in a variety of fields, so there is bound to be one that meets the needs of Indian students wishing to study abroad in a financially affordable manner.

Studying in Japan will provide you with invaluable experience and great results that will be useful for your future, but it is important to do plenty of research and preparation in order to achieve more. If you are at all interested in studying in Japan, please use the information above to help you plan your study in Japan.

We sincerely hope that studying in Japan will be an option for more and more Indian students in the future.
