on their internship in the sixth semester. While their teachers give them an overview of the course, these students take up self-study through MOOC (Massive Open Online Courses) identified by the teacher who will thereafter focus only on the practical side of the course syllabus. The primary focus, therefore, is on the internship, says Immanuel.

Placements for BCA graduates have shown an encouraging trend this year, with many new companies visiting the institute during the campus hiring season. "When the year began, we had a lot of apprehensions about whether there would be placements according to the standards we have seen in past years. But to our pleasant surprise, six new companies visited the campus for the BCA placements alone and the intake by companies has also gone up," says Immanuel. "Also, we saw a rise in packages compared to previous years. The placement trends have been absolutely fantastic for us and the students are very happy." ■
