

ARVIND GANGA, 48

Retired merchant navy officer, now stay-at-home dad, Delhi

Dream fulfilled
Visited Antarctica

How Covid changed me
"We knew it was a risk to take a holiday with the pandemic still going on, but we decided to go ahead. If I had let Covid hold me back, then I would have missed out on one of the most eye-opening, beautiful experiences of my life" will last beyond Covid-19. Take Delhi-based Arjun Seth, 38. This automobile manufacturer and owner of a sustainable living company says his work schedule used to be so hectic that he always felt he had no time for exercise. "It was during the pandemic that I realised I was only making excuses. The real motivation for a lifestyle change comes from within," says Seth. He hired an online trainer and nutritionist and now wakes up at 4.30 am every day for a workout. "I used to drink before Covid, but have completely cut out alcohol now. It isn't just about the way I look. It's a change in mindset. I was aware that I needed to change my entire lifestyle, from dietary choices to daily fitness routines." Seth has lost close to 13 kilos in the past year, but more than that, it's the appreciation and deeper understanding of his body that he has come to value more.

Pune-based Vaibhav Kulkarni, too, decided he simply had to find a work-life balance. The WFH

"PEOPLE WANT A SILVER LINING TO THE PANDEMIC. REALISING, AFTER SO MUCH CHAOS, THAT LIFE IS SHORT, THEY WANT TO DO MORE THINGS THAT MAKE THEM HAPPY"

DR KEDAR TILWE
Psychiatrist, Mumbai