KCR'S GRAND AMBITION

HIS EYE ON A 'LARGER' ROLE, KCR GUNS FOR A HAT-TRICK IN TELANGANA

By Amarnath K. Menon

More than three years after proposing the formation of a federal front of regional parties and going around the country meeting chief ministers from such parties, Telangana chief minister and Telangana Rashtra Samithi (TRS) founder-president K. Chandrashekar Rao (KCR) has now taken to painting a grander canvas. "Not a political realignment, but a qualitative change and an alternative agenda are what the country needs right now," he said at the party's 21st foundation day on April 27. His next words were laced with meaning: "If Hyderabad becomes the site of such a change in the country's direction, it will be a proud moment for the people of Telangana." Speaking at the party plenary, attended by around 3,000 members, KCR waxed eloquent about the prospect of scaling up to a national role, maybe even transforming the TRS into the 'Bharatiya Rashtra Samithi'.
