WITHIN THE SPAN OF 2 YEARS NIFTY WILL REACH 30,000

Within the span of 2 years Nifty will reach 30,000 for the reason

1. In the long run perspective, High liquidity is present in global markets so institutional investors deploy more money into markets across the world, including India.
2. Fundamentals of the Indian economy remain largely intact. The future looks good to most participants in the market. Good companies are likely to do well and more good companies are likely to enter equity markets.
3. It's not all speculation, though Equity remains the best way to grow wealth across the world and across investment asset classes that seem to be fuelling the record highs we see
4. The recent financial results declared by corporate India were surprisingly good. These did give hope to market players that, just maybe, India Inc. can do much better in the coming quarters. Thus, owning the shares of these companies seems like the smart thing to do.
5. COVID-19 virus got tumbled. The hope is that businesses will recover well as the economy unlocks. This will accelerate as and when the pandemic winds down now that vaccinations are happening at pace.
6. Banking on a recovery post-pandemic which witnesses the rally recently, to have been powered significantly due to a significant rise in small caps and companies that are just shy of entering the Nifty 50 index. Small caps were languishing for quite a while until probably the last year or so.
7. There will always be some technical factors that sway the markets. The fact, though, remains that the organised Indian economy seems to be in relatively decent shape after severe pandemic.

   So economy will effect in a positive way and the Indian stock market will hit 30,000 in the long run aspects.
