southwest. China now ranks among the world's major producers of iron ore.

71.

- Southern China has exceptionally large deposits of tungsten. Tungsten reserves in Central Asia also are important, as are those of molybdenum.
- Manganese is found in abundance, with large reserves in Transcaucasia, Central Asia, Siberia, and India; Chinese reserves also are considerable.
- The largest reserves of lead and zinc in Asia are located in the Kuznetsk Basin of Siberia and in central and eastern Kazakhstan. China also has abundant deposits of zinc and lead ores, and North Korea has important lead resources.
- Asia has enormous reserves of bauxite. The largest fields are located in Kazakhstan and in south-central Siberia in the Sayan Mountains. There also are large deposits in India, Indonesia, Turkey, and Malaysia, as well as significant reserves in China.

72.

- Khyber Pass, Khyber also spelled Khaybar, or Khaibar, most northerly and important of the passes between Afghanistan and Pakistan. The pass connects Kabul with Peshawar.
- A mountain pass in the Himalayan region which connects India and China, Nathu La is one of the most visited and popular passes in India. It is believed to be a branch of the Silk Route, which was an ancient route made for trading purposes between countries.
- The Karambar Pass lies about 40 miles (60 km) west of the Afghan-Chinese border, while to the west the Hindu Kush, strictly considered, approaches the border between Afghanistan and Iran without extending into Iranian territory.
- Khunjerab Pass between Pakistan and China. At over 4600m, Khunjerab Pass is the highest paved border crossing in the world on the famed Karakoram Highway.

73.

1. Mount Agung or Gunung Agung is a currently active volcano in Bali, Indonesia, southeast of Mt. Batur volcano, also in Bali.