

68. The Athabasca tar sands, in the Canadian province of Alberta, are the world's largest reservoir of heavy crude oil.

In 2008, a massive spill resulted in 1.1 billion gallons of coal slurry being released near Kingston, Tennessee. The spill damaged homes and entered into the Emory and Clinch Rivers, killing large fish populations and threatening water supplies.

Iron ore was mined from nine active mines and three reclamation operations in Michigan, Minnesota, and Utah. Most of the iron ore was mined in northern Minnesota's Mesabi Range.

Bauxite mining in the United States

- Arkansas
- Eufaula, Alabama
- Andersonville, Georgia