Among ferroalloys, manganese occurs in sedimentary forms in the Brazilian states of Amapá and Minas Gerais, as well as in highland Bolivia. It is also found in much lesser quantities in Argentina, Chile, Ecuador, and Uruguay.

70.

1. Pico da Neblina is the highest peak in Brazil, 2995.3 metres (9827 ft) above sea level.
2. Mount Roraima lies on the Guiana Shield in the southeastern corner of Venezuela's 30,000 square-kilometre (12,000 square-mile) Canaima National Park forming the highest peak of Guyana's Highland Range.
3. Julianatop is the highest mountain in Suriname at 1280 metres (4199 ft). It is located in the Sipaliwini District.
4. Bolívar Peak, also called Pico Bolívar or La Columna, mountain in Sierra Nevada National Park, northwestern Venezuela. Rising 16,332 feet (4978 metres), it is the highest mountain in the Cordillera de Merida and in Venezuela.

71.

1. Hua Hum Pass is an international mountain pass in the Andes between Chile and Argentina.
2. Chungara-Tambo Quemado is a mountain pass through the Cordillera Occidental of the Andes along the border between Chile and Bolivia.
3. Ticlio (or Anticona) is a mountain pass and the highest point of the central road of Peru (km 120), in the Andes mountains, reaching a height of 4818 metres (15,807 ft)
4. The Uspallata Pass, Bermejo Pass or Cumbre Pass, is an Andean pass which provides a route between the wine-growing region around the Argentine city of Mendoza, the Chilean city Los Andes and Santiago the Chilean capital situated in the central Chilean valley.

72.

- Left tributaries: Marañón, Napo, Japurá/Caquetá, Rio Negro/Guainía, Putumayo, Trombetas
- Right tributaries: Ucayali, Javary, Juruá, Purús, Madeira, Tapajós, Xingu