28. The Himalayan ranges show a succession of vegetation from the tropical to the tundra, which change in with the altitude. Deciduous forests are found in the foothills of the Himalayas. It is succeeded by the wet temperate type of forests between an altitude of 1000-2000 m.
29. The Similipal Biosphere reserve is in Mayurbhanj district of Odisha. reserve forest area is of over 2750 sq km. Houses a variety of wild animals, including Royal Bengal Tigers, 304 species of birds and plants, the sanctuary is extremely rich in biodiversity.

    Similipal is also the abode of the black and mela- nistic tiger which is rare. The identified species of fauna include 12 species of amphibians, 29 species of reptiles, and 42 species of mammals, all of which collectively highlight the Biodiversity richness.
30. The Government of India has established about 18 different Biosphere Reserves in the country. Of these, 10 are part of the World Network of Biosphere Reserves, set up under the auspices of the UNESCO Man and Biosphere (MAB) Programme.

    Nandadevi BR, nokrek, pachmarhi and simlipal BRs are few of them.

    The World Network of Biosphere Reserves, currently comprising 669 sites/regions designated by UNESCO in 120 countries since 1976, is a unique global network explicitly linking sustainable development and biodiversity conservation.

    Pachmarhi Biosphere Reserve is a non-use conservation area and biosphere reserve in the Satpura Range of Madhya Pradesh state in central India. The conservation area was created in 1999. It also contains animals from the Himalayan peaks and from the lower western ghats. UNESCO designated it a biosphere reserve in 2009.

Difficulty Level: Medium

31. The air in contact with the earth rises vertically on heating in the form of currents and further transmits the heat of the atmsphere. This process of vertical heating of the atmosphere is known as