Statement II: CORRECT—In wetland farming, the rainfall is in excess of soil moisture requirement of plants during rainy season. Such regions may face flood and soil erosion hazards. These areas grow various water intensive crops such as rice, jute and sugarcane and practise aquaculture in the fresh water bodies.

30. Statement I: CORRECT—The cereals occupy about 54% of total cropped area in India. The country produces about 11% cereals of the world and ranks third in production after China and U.S.A. India produces a variety of cereals, which are classified as fine grains (rice, wheat) and coarse grains (jowar, bajra, maize, ragi), etc.

Statement II: CORRECT—Rice is a staple food for the overwhelming majority of population in India. Though, it is considered to be a crop of tropical humid areas, it has about 3000 varieties which are grown in different agro-climatic regions.

These are successfully grown from sea level to about 2000 m altitude and from humid areas in eastern India to dry but irrigated areas of Punjab, Haryana, western Uttar Pradesh and northern Rajasthan. In southern states and West Bengal, the climatic conditions allow the cultivation of two or three crops of rice in an agricultural year.

31. Statement I: CORRECT—In the years since its independence, India has made immense progress towards food security. Indian population has tripled, and food-grain production more than quadrupled. There has been a substantial increase in available food-grain per capita.

Before the mid-1960s India relied on imports and food aid to meet domestic requirements. However, two years of severe drought in 1965 and 1966 convinced India to reform its agricultural policy and that they could not rely on foreign aid and imports for food security. India adopted significant policy reforms focused on the goal of food grain self-suffi-ciency. This ushered in India's Green Revolution.

Statement II: CORRECT—The initial increase in production was centred on the irrigated areas of the states of Punjab, Haryana and western Uttar Pradesh. With the farmers and the government
