"I have been diagnosed with Polycystic Ovarian Disease (PCOD) because of which weight gain, anxiety, and pelvic pain became a part of my everyday life. After joining Dilli Ki Yogshala, I gained a lot of mental peace because of meditation and asanas which had a calming and soothing effect on my mind and body. Yoga increased flexibility in my body and I lost some weight. With PCOD losing weight is no less than a miracle. I am also having a better menstruation cycle than before. I have learned things and gotten inspired by other members attending these classes and it has helped us develop a support system in each other. I have realised that Meditation and Yoga are a full package to stabilise your mind and body. Thank you so much for this program and gratitude to our Yoga instructor for teaching us so many asanas that help us to rejuvenate our bodies," writes Namita Jain, a resident of Pitampura and a regular participant of Dilli ki Yogshala. While she is among many to have already benefitted from the program, Delhi ki Yogshala is making Meditation and Yoga a mass movement with participation continuously increasing.

In today's dynamic and fast-paced environment, individuals and families are trying to make ends meet in rapidly transforming societal setups in both rural and urban settings. There seems to be a continuous race against time to make ends meet. While this hustle has contributed to increased growth and better per capita income for some nations, it has contributed immensely to the stress and anxiety of individuals and societies collectively. WHO has classified stress as the "epidemic of the 21st Century." The implications of such high levels of stress are both on the physical and mental well-being of an individual. Do we have a solution to deal with stress, anxiety and several other challenges that we face physically and mentally in today's hasty environment?

According to a 2021 report in The Economic Times, "About 36% of Indians are suffering from declining mental health and 31% are feeling disconnected from their own lives."

In order to manage the day-to-day stress of today's lifestyle Yoga has emerged as a notable remedy. Believed to have originated in India in 2700 BC, Yoga has travelled through India and made its presence felt across the globe and is credited with turning around many lives and communities. Healthline states, "Yoga encourages mental and physical relaxation, which helps reduce stress and anxiety. The physical postures promote flexibility, relieve tension, and alleviate pain. Yoga poses may help you release physical blockages like muscle knots, helping release emotions and tension."

With this objective of bringing the ancient science of Yoga to the doorsteps of residents of Delhi with just a missed call away, the Delhi government has started the Dilli Ki Yogshala - a free-of-cost Yoga class with a trained instructor, for all residents of Delhi. There are 17,000 active participants in the Dilli Ki Yogshala movement in Delhi.

A Delhi Government Initiative

The idea behind Dilli Ki Yogshala is to make residents of Delhi adopt a healthy lifestyle by including Meditation and Yoga in their routine to manage stress, anxiety and several other physical issues. The program, launched in 2021, is a free of cost initiative by the Delhi Government under its motto of prioritising the health of its citizens- this is in line with a long list of citizen-driven initiatives. The only requirement is that residents form a group of 25 or more members and nominate a suitable venue to conduct Meditation and Yoga classes. The government provides a trained Yoga instructor, free of cost, to conduct Meditation and Yoga classes thereby increasing the accessibility of Meditation and Yoga in the everyday practice of all Delhi residents. This program is open to all members of the household, across genders and generations.

The Meditation and Yoga instructors will coordinate with a member of each group who shall be called "group coordinator", to organise the classes. Thereafter, the group coordinator shall coordinate with the instructor and fix the time and venue (as deemed suitable by all participants) for the Meditation and Yoga classes.

The program has been very well received by the citizens. Not only have individuals credited the Dilli Ki Yogshala program for introducing a routine into their lives through regular classes, but citizens also shared that their days now start on the right note with peace of mind, breathing in nature and being surrounded by their neighbours.
