Q. Your appearance in Made in Heaven S2 brought you back into the limelight. What was the experience of the show like?

It proved to be an extraordinary journey. Collaborating with Zoya Akhtar was an aspiration I had long cherished. I also had the pleasure of working alongside my talented husband Samir for the first time, which created a sense of familiarity and ease.

Q. What projects are you working on currently?

I'm involved in several projects, each demanding its fair share of dedication. I am filming season three of Bollywood Wives. Simultaneously, I am managing my jewellery business, which is currently in its peak season. I have also taken on interior design endeavours. Admittedly, these responsibilities have stretched me thin, but I am intent on maintaining a delicate balance.

Q. How do you juggle family commitments and work?

I am grateful for the support provided by my husband Samir. Additionally, I am fortunate to have the assistance of an extraordinary nanny who cares for my daughter, Ahana, alongside the constant presence of my mother. It is this robust support network that empowers me.

Q. You also have a successful career as a jewellery designer. Anything exciting on that front?

Jewellery is something I've dedicated myself wholeheartedly to. Inspired by nature, my latest collection features delicately crafted butterflies, flowers, brooches, pendants, and earrings.... I have introduced unique settings and distinctive colour schemes. This departure from my previous styles has been exciting.
