Laying The Foundation For India's Development

This is a critical time for education systems worldwide where the nature of education being imparted in schools needs to be questioned. Significant progress has been made in improving the material well-being of humankind through models of education developed in the post-industrial revolution world. However, most models have completely overlooked building an individual's capacity to think critically about the true nature of progress and happiness.

Today, the environment in which children grow up is highly unpredictable, with constantly changing socio-economic dynamics. Children are facing stress at a scale that has never been experienced before. The challenge of meaningful employment lies ahead of the ever-growing Indian youth. This has created an urgent need to introduce new curricula, which in addition to promoting the development in literacy and numeracy also address the well-being and mindsets of students.

The very foundation of Delhi's reforms has been to help a child become emotionally and professionally sound while being a responsible and empathetic citizen. It is seen that even countries with outstanding education systems are beset with social challenges due to inadequate emphasis on building the right mindset. This is the basis of the mindset curricula that are being implemented in Delhi Government schools.

From Job-Seeker's Mindset to Job-Provider's Mindset

In 2019, Delhi Government launched the Entrepreneurship Mindset Curriculum (EMC) with the key aim of helping students develop mindsets that enable them to understand the nuances of professional success in career paths of their choice. With EMC, Delhi is preparing students' mindsets during school years so that they can take charge of their careers and become empowered citizens of the country. So that they can nurture their own abilities, take charge of their career-paths whether in employment or entrepreneurship. Whatever the students choose to do, they must do it with an Entrepreneurship Mindset!
