Out-of-the-box thinking, research and innovation are what the students of the Indian Institute of Technology (IIT) Delhi get to learn at the premier engineering institute. The first IIT was set up in May 1950 in Hijli, Kharagpur. IITs are autonomous public technical and research universities—now spread across the country with presence in Delhi, Mumbai, Kharagpur, Chennai, Roorkee, Guwahati, Hyderabad, Bhubaneswar, Mandi, Jammu, Dhanbad, Goa and Jodhpur.

IIT Delhi has always been quick to adapt, reinvent and keep pace with the changing times. For long, it has been the hub for engineering education. However, in view of the increasing focus on multidisciplinary education and the need to train students to be all-rounders, IIT Delhi now ensures that both engineering and humanities learning is offered to its students simultaneously.

At IIT Delhi, the postgraduate programmes have been deeply integrated with high-quality research, and money has been invested in building research facilities. The institute has degree programmes in MTech, MSc (research), MDes and MBA, to mention a few. Admission to these courses is not only competitive but also rigorous.

One of the seven IITs in India, which was set up in 1961, IIT Delhi was given the status of an institution of eminence (IoE) in 2018 and was granted almost full autonomy. The institute offers several undergraduate, postgraduate and doctoral programmes, but it's the postgraduate education that it's known more for. Several new departments and centres have been started here in the past four to five years to keep up with the change. These include the Department of Energy Science and Engineer-
