for four of the courses in Tamil, Kannada, Odiya and Urdu. Courses in Assamese and Gujarati will also soon be ready.

It's an exciting time to be at JNU, says the faculty. Not only are new courses and departments being set up, but the 53-year-old campus is also set to have a modern makeover. "JNU is constantly evolving while staying committed to its ethos of equal opportunity," says Pandit. The university has received a Rs 60 crore grant from the central government, and with half the money already in, the administration is busy making big changes to the existing infrastructure. The hostels are set to be upgraded with contemporary kitchens and rooms for students. Security will also be improved throughout the 1,000-acre campus. Additionally, three new

"In my time there, JNU students had a deeply critical intellectual spirit and were prepared to challenge faculty views. I was also warden of Periyar Men's Hostel for nine years, with its share of difficult moments. And who can forget the adda culture, election campaigns, crises and confrontations!"
