A GROWING FOOTPRINT

In August, Christ (deemed to be university) will be opening its sixth campus in the country. Located at Yeshwanthpur in Bengaluru city, the new facility will admit about 2,500 students. As Vice-Chancellor Dr Fr Abraham V.M. says, the bigger focus now will be on creating depth. "I want research to grow," says Abraham, who has set up a new R&D block at the university's main central campus and invested in state-of-the-art equipment, including a scanning electron microscope. This calendar year so far, the research output is more than 700 publications, he says. The focus areas: physics, chemistry, life sciences and computer science, besides social sciences such as psychology.

After two years of online gatherings, Christ recently held its first physical convocation after completing the degree classes and examinations on time. Placements, particularly for MBA students, went well, with more than
