depleting since 2019, with the Uddhav Thackeray-led Shiv Sena in Maharashtra parting ways that year, and the likes of Shiromani Akali Dal and Telugu Desam Party deserting it too.

However, Modi and the BJP can take heart from the MOTN finding that the party would win a majority on its own with 283 seats, something that was in doubt in the previous two MOTNs. The loss of power in the politically crucial state of Bihar, which sends 40 members to the Lok Sabha, has changed equations somewhat. The CVoter snap poll conducted soon after Nitish's exit estimates a loss of around 21 parliamentary seats for the NDA, reducing the BJP's overall tally to 275 from 283—still sufficient for it to form a government on its own.

Modi's personal popularity is also lifting the NDA government's approval ratings, which stand at 56 per cent. But the MOTN respondents are clearly unhappy with the government's handling of the economy, with a majority (67 per cent) stating that their economic status had either deteriorated or remained
