stagnant since the NDA government came to power in 2014 belying its poll promise of achhe din. Most were pessimistic about the chances of improvement in the economy. A substantial 73 per cent deemed the unemployment situation serious. This sentiment has prevailed for more than a year and a half now. When asked if they were happy, the percentage of people who replied in the affirmative registered a significant drop from six months ago.

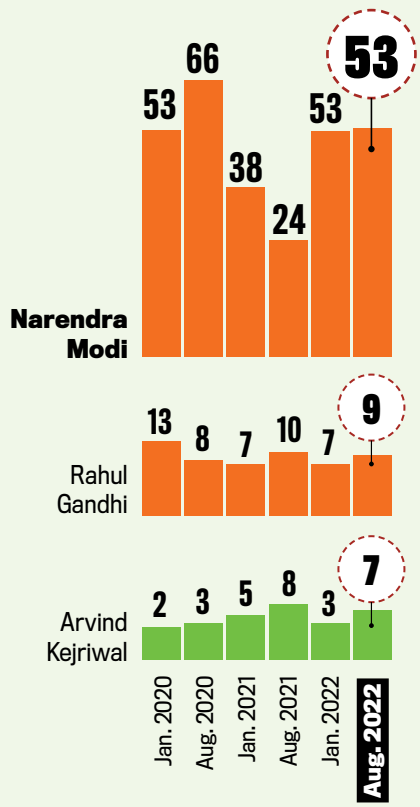

What respondents regard as its successes and failures should be a fair warning for the Modi government to take the MOTN findings seriously. Among the top five successes of the NDA government that were listed, its handling of the Covid pandemic—a remarkable turnaround from past surveys—pushed the building of the Ram temple to fourth place, with the revocation of Article 370 in Kashmir moving to second position, followed by corruption-free governance, with the crackdown on black money in fifth place. In contrast, three of the five big failures of the Modi government are economic in nature, be it price rise, unemployment or low economic growth. Together, they exercise 69 per cent of the respondents. This should be a clear wake-up call for the Modi government.
