from the Modi government are the pandemic and the war in Ukraine, as both are deemed external factors that exacerbated the country's economic woes.

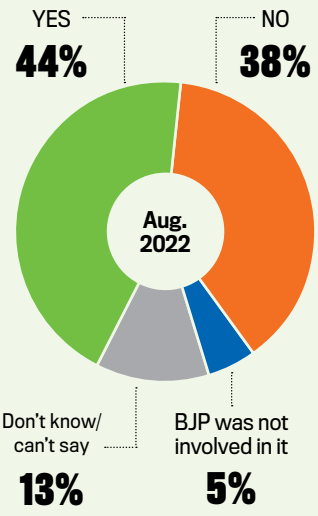

Beyond these political calculations, Modi has also developed an extraordinary connect with the electorate, which sees him as a sincere, extremely hard-working politician keen on public good but firm and decisive at the same time. This includes the way he is perceived to have dealt with external threats from China and Pakistan, with Modi's foreign policy getting a resounding thumbs-up. The perception that Modi is the best bet to solve the country's problems has grown over successive MOTNs despite the economic setbacks caused by the pandemic. Yashwant Deshmukh, founder-editor of

MODI CAN TAKE HEART FROM THE MOTN FINDING THAT BJP WOULD WIN A SIMPLE MAJORITY WERE POLLS HELD TODAY

CVoter, says that Modi's CEO style of governance is what leads voters to endorse him overwhelmingly in consecutive surveys. This trend obtains even at the state level where Naveen Patnaik and Mamata Banerjee do well, as does Arvind Kejriwal. As a result, these leaders are able to buck anti-incumbency trends.

The disarray in the Opposition has also worked in the NDA government's favour and helped boost its ratings. The Congress has failed to get its act together and has been too busy fighting internal dissension to mount any solid challenge to Modi. And for all of Kejriwal's growing success, especially the Aam Aadmi Party (AAP)'s landslide win in Punjab, his national outreach remains limited. While he emerged as the best bet to lead an opposition coalition (before Bihar), his problem is that while he has the leader-

Q. Do you support the BJP's policy of bringing down Opposition governments by poaching or backing rebel MLAs like in Madhya Pradesh, Maharashtra, and Karnataka?
