their abounding vitality. So also are the Canadians, Australians, a n d New Zealanders, all of them largely cut off from the old world and facing life in all its newness.

Russians are not a new people, a n d yet there has been a complete break from the old, like that of death, a n d they have been reincarnated anew, in a m a n n e r for which there is no example in history. T h e y have become youthful again with an energy and vitality lhat are amazing. They are searching for some of their old roots again, but for all practical purposes they are a new people, a new race and a new civilization.

T h e Russian example shows how a people can revitalize itself, become youthful again, if it is prepared to pay the price for it, and tap the springs of suppressed strength a n d energy among the masses. Perhaps this war, with all its horror a n d frightfulness, might result in the rejuvenation of other peoples also, such as survive from the holocaust.

T h e Chinese stand apart from all these. They are not a new race, nor have they gone through that shock of change, from top to bottom, which came to Russia. Undoubtedly, seven years of
