drama may legitimately be regarded as the highest product of Indian poetry, and as summing up in itself the final conception of literary art achieved by the very self-conscious creators of Indian literature... .The Brahmin, in fact, much abused as he has been in this as in other matters, was the source of the intellectual distinction of India. As he produced Indian philo sophy, so by another effort of his intellect he evolved the subtle and effective form of the drama.'

An English translation of Shudraka's 'Mrichhkatika' was staged in New York in 1924. Mr. Joseph Wood Krutch, the dramatic critic of the Nation, wrote of it as follows: 'Here, if anywhere, the spectator will be able to see a genuine example of that pure art theatre of which theorists talk, and here, too he will be led to meditate upon that real wisdom of the East which lies not in esoteric doctrine but in a tenderness far deepe and truer than that of the traditional Christianity which has been so thoroughly corrupted by the hard righteousness of Hebraism.. . A play wholly artificial yet profoundly moving because it is not realistic but r e a l . . . . Whoever the author may have been, and
