For all his admiration for India and many things Indian, I-tsing made it clear that he gave first place to his native land, China. India might be the 'noble region,' but China was the 'divine land.' 'The people of the five parts of India are proud of their own purity and excellence. But high refinement, literary elegance, propriety, moderation, ceremonies of welcoming and parting, the delicious taste of food, and the richness of benevolence and righteousness are found in China only, and no other country can excel her.' 'In the healing arts of acupuncture and cautery and the skill of feeling the pulse, China has never been superseded by any part of India; the medicament for prolonging life is only found in China. .. .From the character of men and the quality of things China is called the "divine land". Is there anyone in the five parts of India who does not admire China?' The word used in the old Sanskrit for the Chinese Emperor is deva-putra, which is an exact translation of 'Son of Heaven'. I-tsing, himself a fine scholar in Sanskrit, praises the language and says it is respected in far countries in the north and south. . . . 'How much more then should people of the divine land (China), as well as the celestial store house (India), teach the real
