of action. About m u c h of this one may not write. There is an intimacy about one's inner life, one's feelings a n d thoughts, which may not a n d cannot be conveyed to others. Yet those contacts, personal and impersonal, mean m u c h ; they affect the individual and mould him a n d change his reactions to life, to his own country, to other nations.

As in other prisons, here also in Ahmadnager Fort, I took to gardening and spent m a n y hours daily, even when the sun was hot, in digging a n d preparing beds for flowers. T h e soil was very bad, stony, full of debris a n d remains of previous building operations, a n d even the ruins of ancient monuments. For this is a place of history, of m a n y a battle and palace intrigue in the past. T h a t history is not very old, as Indian history goes, nor is it very important in the larger scheme of things. But one incident stands out a n d is still remembered: the courage of a beautiful woman, C h a n d Bibi, who defended this fort a n d led her forces, sword in hand, against the imperial armies of Akbar. She was murdered by one of her own men.

Digging in this unfortunate soil, we have come across parts of ancient walls and the tops of domes and buildings buried far
