T h e bond that kept me in Lausanne and Europe was broken and there was no need for me to remain there any longer. Indeed, something else within me was also broken, the realization of which only came gradually to me, for those days were black days for me and my mind did not function properly. Indira and I went to Montreux to spend a few quiet days together.

During our stay at Montreux I had a visit from the Italian Consul at Lausanne, who came over especially to convey to me Signor Mussolini's deep sympathy at my loss. I was a little surprised, for I had not met Signor Mussolini or h a d any other contacts with him. I asked the Consul to convey my gratitude to him. Some weeks earlier a friend in R o m e had written to me to say that Signor Mussolini would like to meet me. There was no question of my going to R o m e then, and I said so. Later, when I was thinking of returning to India by air, that message was repeated and there was a touch of eagerness and insistence about
