REVOLUTIONIZING WOMEN'S HEALTH
RAJASTHAN'S UDAAN SCHEME TAKES FLIGHT

Empowering Women through Udaan

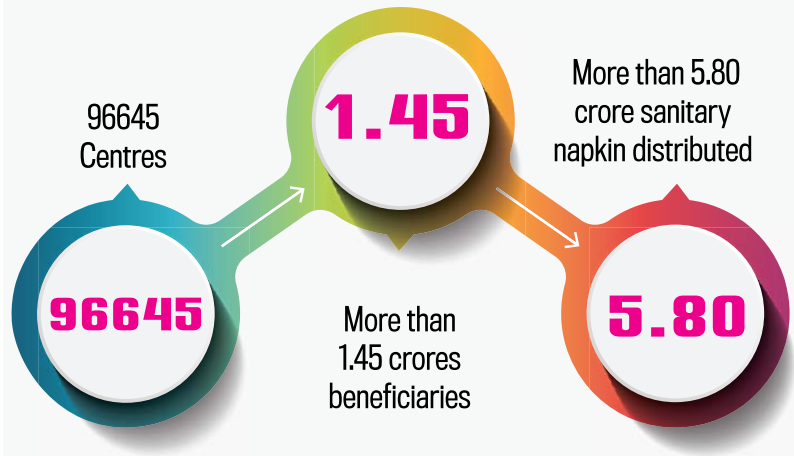

Recognizing the health and hygiene needs of adolescent girls and women, the Rajasthan government, under the leadership of Ashok Gehlot, launched the Udaan Scheme. This pioneering initiative focuses on distributing free sanitary napkins across the state. Rajasthan's Udaan Scheme stands as a unique and pioneering effort, the first of its kind in the country. This scheme addresses the critical issue of menstrual hygiene, especially in rural areas, where girls often face challenges due to lack of proper sanitary products.

In many rural areas, girls resort to using unclean or makeshift materials during menstruation, which can lead to various health issues. Adolescent girls sometimes avoid going to school during their periods, which hampers their education and overall well-being. The lack of access to affordable sanitary napkins compounds the problem for many. The Udaan Scheme, managed by the Women Empowerment Department in collaboration with the Rajasthan Medical Services Corporation, aims to provide free sanitary napkins to 100% of women and adolescent girls.

Before the Udaan Scheme, free sanitary napkins were provided only to school-going girls in classes VI to XII, as well as non-school-going girls aged 10 to 19. However, the Gehlot government expanded the scope of the scheme to encompass all women. Initially, the scheme covered 22 lakh beneficiaries, with Rs 28 crore spent. Now, this ambit has been expanded to benefit 1.45 crore beneficiaries, distributing a total of 5.80 crore sanitary napkins to government schools, anganwadi centers, and related facilities.
